

The Conference of the Birds

Retold by Alexis York Lumbard

Illustrated by Demi

Foreword by Seyyed Hossein Nasr

“Late one moonless night in a far corner of the world there gathered a large flock of birds. They gathered in sorrow, since they had been, for so very long, deprived of a king. . .”. Thus begins the magical adventure of these wayfaring birds. With encouragement from their wise guide, the hoopoe bird, they overcome fears, physical hardships, and their own inner weakness in order to reach the heights of the mountain to meet their King. Children and adults alike will relate to this inspiring tale about conquering one’s faults and practicing the virtues of humility, patience, detachment from worldly goods, and courage. Lavishly illustrated by award-winning illustrator, Demi, and based on an 800 year old classical tale by Attar, this fascinating and beautiful book will delight children and provide parents with a wonderful tool for teaching children about moral and spiritual development.

“This laudable attempt to retell the gist of a 12th-century poem of over 4,000 verses may be of interest to religious educators and parents who want to expose young people to varied spiritual values.... Demi’s delicate watercolor-and mixed-media illustrations, each bordered with a frieze of multiple bird images in every position of flight, suit the text admirably.

“The collaboration of these two gifted women is indeed felicitous. Together they have created a precious work which enables the young to enter a world of truth and beauty that is denied to them in so much that they read and see today.”
