

Horse Raid:
The Making of a Warrior
Written and Illustrated by Paul Goble
Foreword by Joseph Bruchac

Young Lone Bull dreamed of becoming a warrior. For the tribes of the American plains in the Buffalo Days of pre-reservation life, horse raiding was a chance for men to show their courage and bravery in battle. But Lone Bull's father had just refused to let him join the horse raid! How could he become a warrior if he remained at home? So, with the help of his grandfather, Lone Bull sneaks off to follow the other warriors. But will it all end in disaster?

Master storyteller, Paul Goble, brings to life this exciting and timeless coming-of-age story of Lone Bull, a young Lakota boy eager to join the warriors on a horse raid against the Crow.

Praise for the Author and This Book

“The Plains Indians needed horses for hunting buffalo and hauling their possessions. . . . This story tells of Lone Bull’s first horse raid and the battle it led to, which enabled Lone Bull to stand before his people as a warrior. . . . Magnificent color illustrations full of rich detail . . . in this excellently designed honest portrayal of the Indian point of view.”

—School Library Journal (starred review)

“[Goble’s work] is a marriage of authentic design and contemporary artistry. . . . It succeeds beautifully.”

—The New York Times

“The text is solidly written but permeated with the excitement and suspense that Lone Bull feels. Both in the writing and in the stunningly detailed, colorful pictures the Gobles’ account is given added validity by the authenticity of detail and by their respect for the culture they portray.”

—Zena Sutherland, in The Best in Children’s Books: The University of Chicago Guide to Children’s Literature, 1973-1978

“Goble writes with respect and authenticity.”

—San Francisco Chronicle

“His art is tremendous because he is able to recreate the traditional forms with great accuracy and detail. The designs he draws are completely authentic and his colors are the same ones that were used by the old-timers before the reservation days. He is able to recreate the spirit of the old stories with his illustrations and his words.”

—Joe Medicine Crow, former Crow tribal historian, and oldest living member of the Crow Tribe
