

For many, the rules of absolute poverty were too difficult. But Francis was divinely inspired to reject making the rules any easier. From a mountaintop he shouted, “The rules of poverty must be observed to the letter without gloss, without gloss, without gloss!” But not many could follow.

Finally Francis went to the Pope, who advised him to give in a little, for the Franciscan brothers were learning—but all at different rates.